31,033 Births were registered in Scotland during the quarter, being at the annual rate of 298 for every ten thousand of estimated population, or 2·98 per cent.

The annual Birth-rate in the Principal Town Districts was 319 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in the Large Town Districts, 315; in the Small Town Districts, 297; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 262; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 215.

In Glasgow, the annual Birth-rate for every ten thousand persons was 341; in Leith, 331; in Greenock, 320; in Aberdeen, 318; in Paisley, 314; in Dundee, 299; in Edinburgh, 268; and in Perth, 243.

Of the 31,033 Births, 2262, or 7·3 per cent., were illegitimate. In the Large Town Districts, 5·9 per cent. of the Births were illegitimate; in the Small Town Districts, 6·6; in the Insular-Rural Districts, 6·8; in the Principal Town Districts, 7·2; and in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 9·3 per cent.

A comparative statement of the rate of illegitimacy in the Divisions and Counties of Scotland will be found in Tables I. and II. In Table I. it will be seen that the rate of illegitimacy was highest in the North-Eastern Division, although followed closely by the Southern Division. Table II. shows that with regard to the Counties, the rate of illegitimacy in ten of them was over 10 per cent. The highest rate in any County occurred in Wigtown, viz., 15·3 per cent.; and the lowest in Shetland, viz., 0·8 per cent.

Of the 31,033 Births, 16,024 were of males, and 15,009 of females, being in the proportion of 107 males for every 100 females. 10,311 Births were registered during January, or 333 daily; 9741 during February, or 336 daily; and 10,981 during March, or 354 daily.

The number of Deaths registered in England and Wales during the quarter was 136,644, being at the annual rate of 179 for every ten thousand of the estimated population.

In the Principal Town Districts the Death-rate was 191 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in the Large Town Districts it was 180; in the Small Town Districts, 169; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 164; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 152.

In Dundee, and in Aberdeen, the Death-rate for every ten thousand persons was 205; in Glasgow, 203; in Greenock, 197; in Perth, 194; in Paisley, 183; in Edinburgh, 174; and in Leith, 147.

Of the 18,510 Deaths registered, 9294 were of males, and 9216 of females. 6473 Deaths were recorded during January, or 218 daily; 5842 during February, or 201 daily; and 6195 during March, or 200 daily.

MARRIAGES.

7046 Marriages were registered during the quarter, being at the annual rate of 68 for every ten thousand of estimated population, or 0·68 per cent.

Marriages occurred in the Principal Town Districts at the rate of 82 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in the Large Town Districts, the rate was 73; in the Small Town Districts, 61; in the Insular-Rural Districts, 55; and in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 45.

The Marriage rate in Glasgow for every ten thousand persons was 94; in Paisley, 90; in Perth, 89; in Dundee, 84; in Aberdeen, and in Greenock, 78; in Leith, 65; and in Edinburgh, 64.

3777 Marriages were registered during January, being at the rate of 122 daily; 1568 during February, or 54 daily; and 1701 during March, or 55 daily.

INCREASE OF POPULATION AND EMIGRATION.

The number of Births for the quarter having been 31,033, and that of Deaths 18,510, the natural increase of the population is 12,523. In this number, however, no allowance is made for changes caused by emigration or immigration, and of the latter no reliable estimate can be formed; but, in regard to emigration, it is found from the Returns furnished by the Board of Trade that the number of these amounted to 40,224, of whom 18,813 were English, 2389 Scottish, 4859 Irish, 13,419 Foreigners, and 744 whose nationality was not distinguished, but of whom 45 may be assumed to be Scottish. Deducting, therefore, 2389 + 45, the number of Scottish emigrants, from the number representing the excess of Births over Deaths, 10,089 remains as the probable increase of the population for the quarter.

NOTES ON THE NUMERICAL RETURNS OF SCOTTISH METEOROLOGY FOR THE QUARTER ENDING 31st MARCH 1896.

By Dr Buchan, under the Direction of the Council of the Scottish Meteorological Society.

These returns are founded on the observations made, morning and evening, at 67 of the Stations of the Scottish Meteorological Society, and have been prepared from the Observers' separate schedules.

From the individual results for each station, the following collective results have been obtained, assuming them to have been equally well observed, and to represent the whole country :—

COLLECTED RETURNS FOR ALL THE ACCEPTED STATIONS OF THE SCOTTISH METEOROLOGICAL SOCIETY, HAVING A MEAN LATITUDE = 56° 31′ N.; MEAN LONGITUDE = 3° 44′ W.; AND MEAN ELEVATION = 283 Feet.

The weather of JANUARY was thus characterised by an unusually high barometric pressure and high monthly range; a high mean temperature, and rather high mean daily range; a humidity a little under the average; a slight deficiency of southerly and excess of westerly winds; and a rainfall about one-third less than the average of the month, and falling on two days fewer than usual.

The mean barometric pressure was 30·222 inches, which is the highest mean pressure for January recorded by the Society during the past 40 years. The mean excess of all the stations was 0·422 inch, the excess being markedly greater at western and southern stations than at eastern and northern stations. Thus, while the excess in the county of Wigtown was 0·487 inch, it was only 0·304 inch at North Unst. The predominance of westerly winds was due to this distribution of the pressure. But the outstanding feature of the meteorology of the month was the unprecedentedly high barometer on the 9th. On that day the barometric pressure at 32° and sea-level exceeded 31·000 inches over the whole of Scotland. The absolutely highest pressure recorded, 31·108 inches, occurred at Ochtertyre at 9 A.M. of the 9th, which is the highest pressure ever known to have occurred in the British Islands; and it is remarkable that it was at this station where the absolutely lowest sea-level pressure yet recorded, 27·333 inches, occurred on the 26th of January 1884, giving thus a range of 3·775 inches.

The mean temperature was 39°·7, or 2°·6 above the average, the temperature of the days being 3°·1, and of the nights 2°·1, in excess. Owing to the prevailing westerly winds, the excess was greater at western than at eastern stations, reaching in a number of cases 3°·0. In Orkney the excess was only a degree, and in Shetland the mean temperature was half a degree under the average. The month was marked by a singular absence of very low temperatures. The absolutely highest temperature was 58°·0, on the 28th at Braemar, and the lowest 11°·0, on the 23rd at Stobo Castle.

The mean rainfall was 2·53 inches, or 37 per cent. less than the average. The distribution of the rainfall over the country was very unequal. In the counties of Ross, Sutherland, and Caithness, it exceeded the average, the rainfall in some places being a half more than the average. Elsewhere it was under the average, the deficiency being greatest at eastern stations to the south of the Moray Firth, where at many places less than one-fourth of the average amounts were collected. On the other hand, at places in the west, open to the westerly winds from the Atlantic, the deficiency was very much less, the amounts rising in several places to within 10 per cent. of the average. Very little rain fell during the great anti-cyclones from the 4th to the 11th, from the 18th to the 22nd, and from the 29th to the 31st. A storm of some violence occurred on the 14-15th, during which barometric pressure fell and rose with great rapidity.

Thunderstorms are reported from eight stations, with an average of one to each station; and auroras from three stations, also with an average of one.

The weather of FEBRUARY was thus characterised by a very high barometric pressure, with a monthly range considerably less than the average; an unusually high mean temperature, with a mean daily range about the average; the average humidity; an excess of four days above the average of winds from the south, south-west, and west; a rainfall only two-thirds the average, and falling on three days fewer than the average.

The mean barometric pressure was 30·175 inches, or 0·325 inch above the average, being thus a continuation of the high pressures which ruled in January. It differed, however, in the manner of its distribution over the country, pressure being now relatively higher at eastern than at western stations, with the result that the prevailing winds were more south-westerly than in the previous month. It was to the excess of these southerly and south-westerly winds that the high temperature of these two months is to be ascribed.

The mean temperature was 41°·4, or 3°·0 above the average, the excess being equally partitioned between the days and the nights. The excess of temperature was pretty evenly distributed over the whole of Scotland, with the single difference that, owing to the excess of south-westerly winds, the excess at western stations was fully a degree more than occurred in districts in the east. The absolutely highest temperature was 60°·5, at Inverness on the 3rd, and the lowest 18°·5, at Lednathie on the 27th.

The mean rainfall was 2·00 inches, or 34 per cent. under the average. The rainfall was under the average, except in a few scattered restricted districts in the west, where it just exceeded the average of the month. The deficiency was greatest over all eastern districts from the Pentland Firth to the Tweed. Over extensive districts the amount of the fall for the month was only about a fourth part of the average. The rains chiefly fell from the 7th to the 12th, from the 19th to the 21st, and from the 25th to the end of the month.

Thunderstorms occurred at three stations, giving for each station an average of one; and auroras at 14 stations, with an average of two.

The weather of MARCH was thus characterised by a singularly low barometric pressure, with a monthly range greatly in excess of the average; a mean temperature and mean daily range both considerably above the average; a rather low humidity; an excess of eight days above the average of winds from south, south-west, and west; and a rainfall nearly a half more than the average, falling on six days more than the average.

In contradistinction from the two previous months, barometric pressure was very low, having been lower during the past forty years only in the March of 1861 and 1876. The diminution of pressure was very much greater in the north than in the south, and considerably greater in the east than in the west. It was from this distribution of the pressure that the great predominance of southerly and westerly winds resulted.

The mean temperature was 41°·2, or 1°·8 above the average, the excess of the days being 2°·5 and of the nights 1°·0. This excess of temperature was pretty evenly distributed over all districts. The absolutely highest temperature was 60°·0 at Smeaton, on the 24th, and the lowest 17°·8, at Kingussie on the 14th. The above minimum is a remarkably high minimum temperature for March.

The mean rainfall was 4·12 inches, or 47 per cent. above the average. Its distribution over the country was most unequal. Thus, at eastern stations from the Moray Firth to the Tweed, and therefore sheltered from the westerly winds by the intervening hills, the rainfall was under the average, the deficiency being from a sixth to a third of the average. But in all other parts of the country the rainfall was in excess of the average, and over large districts the excess was very great. The largest percentages above their averages were 184 at Turnberry, 173 at Fladda, 154 at Pladda, 143 at Guinart in Islay, 123 at Airds and Holborn Head, 122 at Inveraray, 117 at Ardnamurchan, 114 at Campbeltown, 110 at Fort-Augustus and Beauly, 108 at Poltalloch and Nossbead, 105 at Glasgow, and 103 at Benquhat.

Thunderstorms occurred at 11 stations, giving an average of one for each station; and auroras at 15 stations, with an average of two.

* The actual number of Districts is 1060—many Parishes and Burghs having been divided into two or more Districts for the purpose of Registration. Thus Edinburgh and Glasgow, to each of which only a single number is assigned in the Tables, consist of 5 and 14 Districts respectively. In forming the alphabetical arrangement the principle adopted has been to place compound names in the order in which they are pronounced.

33,745 Births were registered in Scotland during the quarter, being at the annual rate of 324 for every ten thousand of estimated population, or 3·24 per cent.

The annual Birth-rate in the Principal Town Districts was 345 for every ten thousand persons; in the Large Town Districts, 344; in the Small Town Districts, 328; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 289; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 192.

In Glasgow, the annual Birth-rate for every ten thousand persons was 361; in Leith, 354; in Greenock, 350; in Aberdeen, 340; in Paisley, 335; in Dundee, 323; in Perth, 299; and in Edinburgh, 295.

Of the 33,745 Births, 2329, or 6·9 per cent., were illegitimate. In the Large Town Districts, 5·9 per cent. of the Births were illegitimate; in the Small Town Districts, 6·2; in the Principal Town Districts, 6·6; in the Insular-Rural Districts, 6·8; and in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 9·1 per cent.

In Tables I. and II. will be found a comparative statement of the rate of illegitimacy in the Divisions and Counties of Scotland. From these it will be seen that the rate of illegitimacy was highest in the North-Eastern and Southern Divisions; and that in eleven of the Counties the rate was over 10 per cent. The lowest rate in any County occurred in Orkney, viz., 2·5 per cent.; and the highest in Elgin, viz., 15·2 per cent.

Of the 33,745 Births, 17,207 were of males, and 16,538 of females, being in the proportion of 104 males to every 100 females. 11,231 Births were registered during April, being at the rate of 374 daily; 11,077 during May, or 335 daily; and 11,437 during June, or 381 daily.

The number of Deaths registered in England and Wales during the quarter was 124,950, being at the annual rate of 164 for every ten thousand of estimated population.

The Death-rate for every ten thousand persons in the Principal Town Districts was 189; in the Large Town Districts, 170; in the Small Town Districts, 153; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 152; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 134.

In Glasgow, the Death-rate for every ten thousand persons was 206; in Dundee, 194; in Perth, 192; in Paisley, 188; in Aberdeen, 180; in Greenock, 177; in Leith, 171; and in Edinburgh, 168.

Of the 17,613 Deaths, 8835 were of males, and 8778 of females. 5989 Deaths were registered during April, or 200 daily; 5756 during May or 186 daily; and 5868 during June, or 196 daily.

MARRIAGES.

8004 Marriages were registered in Scotland, during the quarter, being at the annual rate of 77 for every ten thousand of estimated population, or 0·77 per cent.

Marriages occurred in the Principal Town Districts at the annual rate of 97 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in the Large Town Districts, the rate was 76; in the Small Town Districts, 68; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 58; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 19.

In Edinburgh Marriages occurred at the rate of 108 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in Glasgow at the rate of 103; in Aberdeen, 99; in Dundee, 93; in Leith, 91; in Perth, 85; in Paisley, 81; and in Greenock, 80.

2263 Marriages were registered during April, or 75 daily; 1000 during May, or 32 daily; and 4741 during June, or 158 daily.

INCREASE OF POPULATION AND EMIGRATION.

The Births for the quarter having amounted to 33,745, and the Deaths to 17,613, the natural increase of the population, not allowing for changes caused by emigration or immigration, amounted to 16,132. No reliable estimate of the number of immigrants can be formed, but with regard to emigrants, it is found from the Returns furnished by the Board of Trade that the number of these for the quarter amounted to 73,886, of whom 25,646 were English, 4106 Scottish, 20,445 Irish, 23,095 Foreigners, while of 594 the nationality was not distinguished, but 33 of them may be assumed to be Scottish. If then 4106 + 33, the number of Scottish emigrants be deducted from the number representing the excess of Births over Deaths, we have 11,993 as the probable increase of population for the quarter.

WEATHER.

The following remarks on the weather of the quarter are extracted from the Meteorological Returns which appear in the Registrar-General's Monthly Reports :—

The weather of April was characterised by a mean barometric pressure considerably above, with a monthly range considerably under, the average; a mean temperature hitherto unprecedented for April, with a mean daily range about the average; a very low humidity, having been only once lower, viz. April 1858, when it was 73; a rainfall only half the average, falling, however, on the average number of days; and a prevalence of west winds absolutely unprecedented.

The weather of May was characterised by a very high mean barometric pressure, considerably higher than any that has occurred during the past 40 years, with a very low monthly range, being the third lowest during the same years; a very high mean temperature, being the highest during the past 40 years, with a very large mean daily range, which in May was only exceeded in 1859; a very low humidity, a lower having occurred in 1859; a very small rainfall, smaller amounts having been collected in May 1859 and 1876, being respectively 0·36 inch and 0·55 inch; and a prevalence of north-westerly winds.

The weather of June was characterised by a mean barometric pressure, a little under the average, with a monthly range lower than has been recorded since 1864; a mean temperature about a degree and a half above the average, with a mean daily range above a degree and a half lower than has occurred since 1879; a mean humidity greater than any since 1875; a rainfall 33 per cent. above the average, falling on seven days in excess of the mean of June; and a prevalence of north-easterly winds.

The mean height of the barometric column, reduced to sea-level and 32° Fahr., was 30·041 inches in April, 30·260 inches in May, and 29·904 inches in June. The mean temperature for the quarter was 52°·1, being 2°·8 above the average temperature for the quarter during the last ten years. METEOROLOGICAL REPORT

FOR THE MONTHS OF

APRIL, MAY, JUNE.

1896.

W. & A.K. Johnston, Edin.

NOTES ON THE NUMERICAL RETURNS OF SCOTTISH METEOROLOGY FOR THE QUARTER ENDING 30TH JUNE 1896.

By Dr BUCHAN, under the Direction of the Council of the Scottish Meteorological Society.

THESE returns are founded on the observations made, morning and evening, at 69 of the Stations of the Scottish Meteorological Society, and have been prepared from the Observers' separate schedules.

From the individual results for each station, the following collective results have been obtained, assuming them to have been equally well observed, and to represent the whole country :—

Hence the month of APRIL 1896 was characterised by a rather high barometric pressure, with a very low monthly range; a high mean temperature but with the average daily range of the month; an extraordinary excess of westerly winds, and deficiency of easterly winds, blowing with a mean force considerably above the average; and a rainfall slightly under the average, but falling on three days more than the average.

The mean barometric pressure was 30·041 inches, having in previous Aprils been higher only in 1861, 1865, 1873, and 1893. The excess was very unequally distributed over the country; thus while in Galloway it was 0·210 inch, it was even 0·020 inch under the average at North Unst, and while the excess was 0·190 inch at Rothesay, it was only 0·128 inch at Eyemouth. From this abnormal distribution of the pressure, it resulted that winds from S.W., W., and N.W. were eleven days more than the average, an excess which has not been exceeded in any April during the past 40 years.

From the marked excess of these winds, the all but complete absence of winds from easterly directions, and the anticyclonic character of the weather which prevailed, the mean temperature was very greatly above the average. The excess however was very unequally distributed over Scotland. Thus with these westerly winds coming from the Atlantic, the temperature of which at this season is very little above the minimum for the year, the excess at stations near the west coast was only from 1°·5 to 2°·0; whereas as these winds become heated as they advanced eastwards over the land, at inland stations in the east, the excess of temperature exceeded 4°·0 in many places. The absolutely highest temperature was 69°·0 at Ochtertyre, on the 24th, and the lowest 23°·0 at Drumlanrig, on the 15th.

The mean rainfall was 2·03 inches, or 5 per cent. less than the average. It was very unequally distributed over the districts. Thus to the west and north of a line drawn from Rothesay, Dalnaspidal, Nairn, and Thurso, it was above the average, the greatest excess, or 121 per cent. above the average, being recorded at Glencarron, where 8·84 inches fell. In other districts the fall was under the average, the greatest deficiency occurring in the east between the Don and the Cheviots. It is noteworthy that at western stations south of the Clyde, the rainfall was also under the average; these western stations being sheltered by Ireland from the heavier rains of the westerly winds.

Thunderstorms were recorded at 25 stations, with an average of one for each station, these occurring mostly from the 9th to the 12th, and during the last three days of the month. Auroras are reported from 5 stations, with an average of one for each station.

The weather of MAY was thus characterised by a mean barometric pressure, unprecedentedly high for May, with a very small monthly range; an unusually high temperature, with a high mean daily range, which has not been exceeded these 40 years; an exceedingly low humidity; a very small rainfall, falling only on seven days, which is only half the average days of the month; and a marked prevalence of north westerly winds.

The weather of the month was eminently anticyclonic with the usual accompaniments of high pressure, low humidity, clear skies, and strong sunshine. The mean barometric pressure was 30·260 inches, being the highest hitherto recorded in May; and as regards the other months, it has been only once exceeded in February 1891, the mean barometric pressure of this month being 30·290 inches. The excess of pressure was considerably greater at western than at eastern stations, and also greater in the south than in the north, and out of this disposition of the barometric pressure resulted the excess of north westerly winds which prevailed. Except on the 19th and 20th the wind did not rise anywhere to the force of a gale.

The mean temperature was 53°·0, or 4°·0 above the average, the excess of the day temperatures being 6°·1, but of the night temperatures only 1°·9, thus showing impressively that it was the strong sunshine which occasioned the unusually high temperature of the month. The excess of temperature was greatest in inland situations south of the Grampians, where in several districts it approached 6°·0; and the least excess in Shetland where it was only 2°·5. The absolutely highest temperature was 84°·6 at Dundee Harbour on the 12th, and the lowest 28°·0 at Pinmore on the 2nd.

The mean rainfall of the month was only 0·98 inch, or 57 per cent. less than the average. In Orkney, Caithness, and the north of Sutherland, the rainfall was above the average, the greatest excess being 25 per cent. at Deerness. Everywhere else, the rainfall was under the average, the amounts collected over great breadths being less than a fourth part of the average. Nearly the whole of the rain fell from the 14th to the 23rd, the rest of the month being practically rainless.

Thunderstorms were unusually few, being reported only at four stations, with an average of one each station. Auroras were observed at nine stations, with an average of one each station, these occurring on the 2nd, 3rd, and 17th.

The weather of JUNE was thus characterised by a mean barometric pressure a little under the average, with a monthly range singularly small, June 1861 only showing a smaller; a mean temperature a degree and a half above the average, with a mean daily range a degree less than the average; a large humidity; a rainfall, fully a third more than the average, falling on four days more than the average; and three days' excess of north easterly winds.

The mean barometric pressure was 29·904 inches, or 0·037 inch less than the average. The lowering of the pressure was greater in the south than in the north and in the west than in the east. Thus while at Monach it was 0·050 inch, less than the average, at Aberdeen it was 0·023, and at North Unst, it was the average. With this relatively higher pressure in the north and east, there resulted a prevalence of north easterly winds above the average.

The mean temperature of all the stations was 56°·2, or 1°·4 above the average, the excess of the days being 0°·9 and of the nights 1°·9, thus offering a strong contrast to the weather of the previous month. The distribution of the temperature was peculiar. Under a predominance of winds from the north-east, the mean temperature in Shetland, the extreme north of Scotland, and the north-east of Aberdeen was about half a degree under the average; but above it in all other parts of Scotland. The greatest excess was over all south western districts, where it rose to nearly 3°·0, and over these districts the daily range of temperature was much greater than at situations exposed to the north easterly winds coming directly from the North Sea. The absolutely highest temperature was 84°·0 at Dumfries on the 14th; and the lowest 33°·0 at Wolfelee on the 1st.

This is now the sixth month in succession during which the mean temperature has been above the average, the monthly excess, in the order of the months, being, 2°·6, 3°·0, 1°·8; 2°·9, 4°·0, and 1°·4, giving a mean excess of temperature of 2°·6 for the half year.

The mean rainfall was 3·39 inches, or 37 per cent. above the average. The distribution of the rainfall over the country was peculiarly striking. Owing to the unusually large humidity of the north easterly winds, they carried with them a greatly increased rainfall to westward over Scotland than ordinarily accompanies easterly winds. At the following places more than double the average rainfall of June was collected, Stobo Castle, Glasgow, Gordon Castle, Cawdor, Inverness, and Dunrobin. Another peculiarity of the rainfall was that it fell short of the average, in patches of the counties of Dumfries, Roxburgh, Berwick, Haddington, Argyll, Aberdeen, Ross, and Sutherland, but the deficiency in all cases was small. Very little rain fell from the 11th to the 15th, and on the 25th and 26th. The heaviest falls occurred from the 4th to the 8th and on the 16th and 17th.

Thunderstorms were pretty frequent, being reported at 39 stations, giving an average of two for each station, and occurring chiefly from the 2nd to the 10th.

* The actual number of Districts is 1060—many Parishes and Burghs having been divided into two or more Districts for the purpose of Registration. Thus Edinburgh and Glasgow, to each of which only a single number is assigned in the Tables, consist of 5 and 14 Districts respectively. In forming the alphabetical arrangement the principle adopted has been to place compound names in the order in which they are pronounced.

In the Principal Town Districts the annual Birth-rate for every ten thousand persons was 317; in the Large Town Districts, 315; in the Small Town Districts, 313; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 274; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 245.

The annual Birth-rate for every ten thousand persons in Greenock, was 345; in Paisley, 333; in Glasgow, 332; in Leith, 324; in Aberdeen, 313; in Dundee, 293; in Perth, 277; and in Edinburgh, 261.

Of the 32,052 Births, 2280, or 7·1 per cent., were illegitimate. In the Small Town Districts, 6·0 per cent. of the Births were illegitimate; in the Large Town Districts, 6·3; in the Insular-Rural Districts, 6·7; in the Principal Town Districts, 6·8; and in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 9·6 per cent.

In Tables I. and II. will be found a comparative statement of the rate of illegitimacy in the Divisions and Counties of Scotland. Table I. shows the rate of illegitimacy to have been highest in the North-Eastern and Southern Divisions; while from Table II. it may be gathered that in nine of the Counties the rate was over 10 per cent. The highest rate in any County occurred in Elgin, viz., 15·1 per cent.; the next highest being in Peebles and Wigtown, respectively, viz., 14·5 per cent. No illegitimate Births occurred in Nairn.

Of the 32,052 Births, 16,475 were of males, and 15,577 of females, being in the proportion of 106 males to every 100 females. 10,911 Births were registered during July, or 352 daily; 10,715 during August, or 346 daily; and 10,426 during September, or 348 daily.

The number of Deaths registered in England and Wales during the quarter was 126,541, being at the annual rate of 164 for every ten thousand of estimated population.

The Death-rate in the Principal Town Districts for every ten thousand persons was 169; in the Large Town Districts, 148; in the Small Town Districts, 147; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 134; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 127.

The Death-rate for every ten thousand persons in Glasgow, was 186; in Perth, 180; in Paisley, 170; in Greenock, 169; in Dundee, 160; in Leith, 155; in Edinburgh, 154; and in Aberdeen, 145.

Of the 16,062 Deaths, 8110 were of males, and 7952 of females. 5685 Deaths were registered during July, being at the rate of 183 daily; 5288 during August, or 171 daily; and 5089 during September, or 170 daily.

MARRIAGES.

7493 Marriages were registered in Scotland during the quarter, being at the annual rate of 71 for every ten thousand of estimated population, or 0·71 per cent.

Marriages occurred in the Principal Town Districts at the annual rate of 95 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in the Large Town Districts, at the annual rate of 76; in the Small Town Districts, at the rate of 61; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, at the rate of 40; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, at the rate of 22.

In Aberdeen Marriages occurred at the annual rate of 114 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in Edinburgh at the rate of 100; in Glasgow and in Paisley, 98; in Perth, 95; in Greenock, 89; in Dundee, 88; and in Leith, 86.

3449 Marriages were registered during July, being at the rate of 111 daily; 1979 during August, or 64 daily; and 2065 during September, or 69 daily.

INCREASE OF POPULATION AND EMIGRATION.

The Births for the quarter amounted to 32,052, and the Deaths to 16,062; the natural increase of the population, not allowing for changes caused by emigration or immigration, was 15,990. Of the number of immigrants no reliable estimate can be formed, but from Returns furnished by the Board of Trade it is found that the number of emigrants for the quarter amounted to 79,364, of whom 34,776 were English, 6657 Scottish, 11,753 Irish, 25,035 Foreigners, and 1143 whose nationality was not distinguished, of whom, however, 97 may be assumed to be Scottish. If then 6657 + 97, the number of Scottish emigrants, be deducted from the number representing the excess of Births over Deaths, 9236 remains as the probable increase of population for the quarter.

NOTES ON THE NUMERICAL RETURNS OF SCOTTISH METEOROLOGY FOR THE QUARTER ENDING 30TH SEPTEMBER 1896.

By Dr BUCHAN, under the Direction of the Council of the Scottish Meteorological Society.

THESE returns are founded on the observations made, morning and evening, at 69 of the Stations of the Scottish Meteorological Society, and have been prepared from the Observers' separate schedules.

From the individual results for each station, the following collective results have been obtained, assuming them to have been equally well observed, and to represent the whole country :—

Hence the month of JULY 1896 was characterised by a mean barometric pressure, decidedly above the average with a monthly range greatly under it; a mean temperature half a degree less than the average, with a mean daily range; an average mean humidity; a rainfall nearly a fourth part in excess of the average, falling on one day more than the average; and winds of the average force and direction.

The mean barometric pressure was 29·965 inches, which is 0·090 inch above the average; but as the manner of the distribution was nearly normal except in the north-west where it was a little in excess, the winds, both as respects direction and force, were nearly normal. At several stations the weather was stormy from the 25th to the 27th.

The mean temperature, and its partition between the days and the nights, were half a degree less than the average. At east coast stations and for some distance inland, temperature was slightly above the average, but in other districts generally under it. The absolutely highest temperature was 83°·0 at Smeaton, on the 20th, and the lowest 34°·0 at Kingussie and North Esk Reservoir, both on the 28th.

The mean rainfall was 3·89 inches, or 23 per cent. above the average. It was under the average in Inverness-shire; in the north-west of the counties of Argyll and Perth; in the inland and western parts of Sutherland; and generally in Banff and Aberdeen. Elsewhere over the country the rainfall was above the average. The excess was greatest at south-western stations, the largest amount collected anywhere being 7·63 inches at Cally, which is 111 per cent. above its July average. The greatest deficiency was 31 per cent. at Fort Augustus, the amount falling there being 2·09 inches. The greater part of the rain fell from the 3rd to the 9th, from the 19th to the 25th, and on the 29th. During the rest of the month, passing showers characterised the weather. Thunderstorms were singularly few.

The weather of AUGUST 1896 was characterised by a mean barometric pressure, considerably above the average, with a monthly range unusually small; a mean temperature fully a degree and a half under the average; with a mean daily range about the average; a mean humidity greatly less than the average; a rainfall much under the average, but falling on the average number of days; and an unwonted predominence of W., N.W., and N. winds.

The mean barometric pressure was 29·975 inches, being 0·124 inch in excess of the average. The excess above the average was much greater in the west than in the east, and in the south than in the north. Thus it was 0·166 inch at Monach, and 0·096 inch at Aberdeen ; and 0·147 inch at Dumfries, and 0·81 inch at North Unst. From this manner of distribution of the pressure, it followed naturally that W., N.W., and N. winds were each two days above the average, or an excess of six days from these cold directions. This shows a greater excess of these winds than has occurred in any August during the past forty years. Except during the last four days of the month, storms of wind were almost altogether absent.

The mean temperature was 55°·0, or 1°·6 under the average ; the deficiency being equally partitioned between the days and the nights. The deficiency was least in the Forth and Clyde districts, where at several places it did not amount to half a degree ; and greatest in the north-east from Inverness round by Aberdeen to the Firth of Tay, and thence westward across the country to Skye and Mull ; the deficiency at many places exceeding two degrees. The absolutely highest temperature was 81°·0 at Dundee on the 12th, and the lowest 31°·0 at Haddo House on the 26th.

The mean rainfall was 2·75 inches, or 25 per cent. under the average. Its distribution over the country was most unequal. If a line be drawn from the Crinan Canal through Fort-William, Glencarron, and Lairg to the Pentland Firth, over all Scotland to the east of that line, the rainfall was under the average ; whereas to the west of it the rainfall was above it. At Stornoway and Scourie the rainfall was fully double the August average. On the other hand the greatest deficiency, 70 per cent., occurred in the south-east in the Cheviots. At eastern and southern stations generally the deficiency approached, and in some districts exceeded, half the average rainfall. The principal characteristics of the weather was a comparative absence of very heavy days rains, the frequency of the falls as compared with the gross amounts collected for the month, and the short continued very dry spells of weather between the recurring rains. Thunderstorms, though still under the average, were more frequent than in July. On the first three days of August auroras were noted at several stations.

The month of SEPTEMBER 1896 was characterised by a very low mean barometric pressure, with a monthly range greater than any recorded since 1870 ; a mean temperature about half a degree under the average, with a mean daily range 1°·7 under the average ; a humidity slightly over the average ; a rainfall fully a third above the average, and falling on five days more than usual in this month, the number of days' rain, twenty-one, being during the last forty years exceeded only in 1872, when rain fell on twenty-two days. But the outstanding feature of the weather was the absolutely unprecedented deficiency of sunshine, the mean number of hours being only 76, the next lowest in September during the last forty years being 103 hours in 1881. This number 76 is lower than any recorded since 1856 in March, April, May, June, July, and August.

The mean barometric pressure was 29·667 inches, or 0·177 inch less than the average, which is lower than has occurred during any September since 1869. The diminution of pressure was considerably greater at southern than at northern stations, by which gradients were formed for easterly winds. These winds therefore prevailed four days in excess of the average. The mean temperature was 52°·4, or 0°·4 under the average, the depression of temperature being wholly occasioned by the colder days, which were 1°·3 under the average, whereas the nights were 0°·4 above it—the simple result of the deficient sunshine. At all eastern stations, temperature was from half a degree to a degree under the average, but on the other hand at western stations, temperature was from half a degree to a degree above it. Here again is seen the increased temperature acquired by easterly winds during the warmer months of the year as they advance westwards over the land. The absolutely highest temperature was 74°·0 at Dumfries on the 3rd ; and the lowest 29°·0 at Stronvar and Stobo Castle both on the 21st.

The mean rainfall was 4·87 inches, or 38 per cent. above the average. Owing to the great prevalence of easterly winds, the whole of the east side of Scotland had a rainfall above the average ; and a peculiarity of these east winds was that they carried a heavy rainfall across the watershed over western districts, except a narrow strip in the extreme west stretching in a north-westerly direction from Rothesay to the Outer Hebrides. The heaviest falls were recorded in the upland districts of the interior. Thunderstorms were also frequent, and many of them were accompanied with heavy rainfalls. The following show the greatest excesses above their averages in percentages :—116 at Glasgow, 104 at Deerness, 76 at Dunrobin and Kelso, and 70 at Wick and Ochtertyre. The weather was on the whole fine from the 4th to the 8th, and during the last three days of the month. During the rest of the month the weather was characterised by constantly recurring rains; heavy downpours exceeding an inch a day being a repeated occurrence.

* The actual number of Districts is 1060—many Parishes and Burghs having been divided into two or more Districts for the purpose of Registration. Thus Edinburgh and Glasgow, to each of which only a single number is assigned in the Tables, consist of 5 and 14 Districts respectively. In forming the alphabetical arrangement the principle adopted has been to place compound names in the order in which they are pronounced.

Districts, 165; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, 148; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, 134.

For every ten thousand persons in Glasgow, the Death-rate was 221; in Dundee, and in Perth, 209; in Paisley, 200; in Aberdeen, 199; in Edinburgh, 180; in Leith, 166; and in Greenock, 165.

Of the 18,449 Deaths, 9067 were of males, and 9382 of females. 5615 Deaths were registered during October, or 181 daily; 6198 during November, or 207 daily; and 6636 during December, or 214 daily.

MARRIAGES.

7713 Marriages were registered in Scotland during the quarter, being at the annual rate of 73 for every ten thousand of estimated population, or 0·73 per cent.

Marriages occurred in the Principal Town Districts at the annual rate of 87 for every ten thousand of the estimated population; in the Small Town Districts, at the rate of 66; in the Large Town Districts, at the rate of 65; in the Mainland-Rural Districts, at the rate of 63; and in the Insular-Rural Districts, at the rate of 43.

In Edinburgh Marriages occurred at the annual rate of 97 for every ten thousand of estimated population; in Aberdeen at the rate of 96; in Glasgow the rate was 92; in Leith, and in Greenock, 86; in Perth, 85; in Paisley, 77; and in Dundee, 73.

1873 Marriages were registered during October, being at the rate of 60 daily; 2217 during November, or 74 daily; and 3623 during December, or 117 daily.

INCREASE OF POPULATION AND EMIGRATION.

The Births for the quarter amounted to 32,323, and the Deaths to 18,449; the natural increase of the population, not allowing for changes caused by emigration or immigration, being 13,874. Regarding immigrants no reliable estimate can be obtained, but in regard to emigrants it is found from the Returns furnished by the Board of Trade that the number of these for the quarter amounted to 48,438, of whom 23,568 were English, 3727 Scottish, 5200 Irish, 14,419 Foreigners, and 1524 whose nationality was not distinguished, but of whom 121 may be considered as Scottish. If then 3727 + 121, the number of Scottish emigrants, be deducted from the number representing the excess of Births over Deaths, 10,026 remains as the probable increase of the population for the quarter.

Thus the weather of OCTOBER 1896 was characterised by a very low barometric pressure, with a rather large monthly range ; a mean temperature lower than that of any October during the past forty years, with a mean daily range above the average ; a low mean humidity ; a mean rainfall above the average, falling on one day more than the average ; a very unusual prevalence of northerly winds, blowing with a force considerably more than the average.

The mean barometric pressure was only 29·695 inches, or 0·111 inch less than the average. The distribution of this pressure was quite exceptional, in that it was, latitude for latitude everywhere much greater at western than at eastern stations, instead of being much less than is the normal distribution. Thus gradients were formed for northerly winds which were above the averages, N.W. winds one day, N. four days, and N.E. two days, in all seven days excess of northerly winds. It is the unusual prevalence of winds from these cold quarters that brought about the low temperature, the low humidity, and the large mean daily range of temperature.

The mean temperature, was 42°·2, or 4°·2 under the average, the days being 3°·9 and the nights 4°·6 colder than usual. The depression of temperature was much greater at southern than at northern stations, being 5°·0 on the shores of the Solway, but only 3°·0 in Shetland ; and greater at western than at eastern stations, the differences being respectively 4°·5 and 3°·5. The greatest cold prevailed during the northerly winds from the 10th to the 16th, and from the 21st to the end of the month. The absolutely highest temperature was 68°·5 at Haddo House on the 1st, and the lowest 15°·9 at Kingussie on the 25th.

The mean rainfall was 4·62 inches, or 14 per cent. above the average. Its distribution over the country was exceedingly irregular. It was above the average at all places to the north of the latitude of Stornoway, and at all eastern places with the exception of Perthshire and the hilly districts of Forfarshire ; but in all other districts it was under the average. It rose to double the average in the upland districts of the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, Edinburgh, Haddington, Berwick and Roxburgh ; but on the other hand to about half the average of October over wide districts from North Uist to Galloway. The rains were pretty evenly distributed over the month, with the exception of the time from the 12th to the 17th when little rain fell ; the heaviest falls occurred from the 7th to the 10th, and 18th and 19th. Storms were widely experienced from the 3rd to the 9th ; 17th to the 19th ; and 25th to the 27th. Thunderstorms, chiefly in the south, are reported from five stations, giving an average of three to each station ; and Auroras at several stations in the north on the 10th, 11th, and 12th.

NOVEMBER 1896.

Thus the weather of NOVEMBER 1896 was characterised by an almost unprecedentedly high mean barometer, having been exceeded only in the Novembers of 1867 and 1879 ; with a monthly range about the average ; a mean temperature a degree above the average, with a mean daily range 0°·6 under it ; a high humidity : a rainfall about half the average, falling on three days fewer than the average ; and a slight predominance of westerly winds.

The mean barometric pressure was 30·114 inches, or 0·293 inch above the average. The excess of pressure was relatively greater at southern than at northern stations, the excess at North Unst being 0·215 inch, whereas on the shores of the Solway it was 0·310 inch, and a little greater at western than at eastern stations, resulting in a slight diminution of S.E. winds and excess of W. winds.

The mean temperature was 41°·5, or 0°·9 above the average, the days showing an excess of 0°·6 but the nights 1°·2, the greater excess of the nights being perhaps occasioned by the greater cloudiness of the sky, the distribution of the temperature among the stations was quite peculiar, temperature being under the average to the south of a line drawn from Berwick to Ayr, the deficiency in strictly inland situations varying from 1°·0 to 2°·0. In all other districts temperature was above the average, the excess being greatest in the west and north, where, at several places it amounted to or even exceeded 2°·0. The absolutely highest temperature was 58°·5 at Dunrobin on the 22nd, and the lowest 16°·0 at Stobo Castle on the 30th.

The rainfall was 1·90 inch, or 50 per cent. under the average. This is the smallest rainfall of any November for the past forty years, except 1867, when the mean amount was only 1·25 inch. Its distribution over the country was remarkable, being at a considerable number of places less than a fourth part of the average of the month. In north-western and northern districts the deficiency was much less, and becoming less and less in proceeding to the north-west till at Stornoway, the Butt of Lewis, and Cape Wrath it rose a little above the average. Most of the rain fell from the 6th to the 20th and besides heavy rains fell at stations in the north-west from the 21st to the 24th.

No wide spread storm is reported during the month, but storms in restricted districts took place on the 5–6th, 9th,–11th, 14th, and 19th. Thunderstorms occurred only at three stations ; and Auroras at six stations with an average of two.

DECEMBER 1896.

Hence the weather of DECEMBER 1896 was characterised by a low barometer, with a monthly range a little under the average ; a mean temperature slightly under the average, with a mean daily range 0°·3 under the average ; an average humidity ; an unusually heavy rainfall which has been only twice exceeded during the past forty years, falling on twenty-one days, being five days above the average ; and a great excess of south-easterly winds, E. winds being two days, S.E. one day, and S. one day above the respective averages.

The mean barometric pressure was 29·679 inches, or 0·112 inch under the average. On the coast of the Solway pressure was 0·150 inch but at North Unst only 0·008 inch under the average ; pressure was also relatively higher at eastern than at western stations. To this distribution of the pressure, the prevalence of the south-easterly winds is to be ascribed, which in their turn were accompanied with remarkable distributions of temperature and rainfall.

The mean temperature was 37°·6, being only 0°·2 less than the average, the means of the days and the nights being also near the averages. The prevailing winds being south-easterly acquired in some degree the higher temperature of the North Sea at this season, with the result that except Perthshire, all eastern districts from Aberdeenshire to the Tweed had a temperature from half a degree to a degree above the average. In other parts of Scotland, temperature was under the average, the lowering of the temperature being a degree over wide districts, and in Galloway approaching two degrees. The absolutely highest temperature was 58°·0 at Craigrannoch on the 26th ; and the lowest 8°·4 at Ladylaw on the 1st.

The mean rainfall was 5·61 inches, or 42 per cent. above the average. It was very large in eastern situations from the mouth of the Deveron to the Tweed, being at many places considerably more than double the December average. The heavier rains falling with the south-easterly winds, the rainfall at Duns Castle rose to 164 per cent. above the average, but in Midlothian on the other side of the Lammermuirs, the excess was only 50 per cent. Again at Lednathie on the southern slopes of the Grampians, the rainfall was 158 per cent. above the average, but on the other side of the Grampians, from Speyside to Cromarty, it was only about 30 per cent. above the average. This was also the percentage of excess in Caithness and Orkney in the north, and in the south from the Solway to Loch Linnhe. Over the rest of Scotland, the rainfall was under the average, the deficiency being greatest, about 50 per cent, in Skye, the Hebrides, and the west of Sutherland. The heaviest rains fell from the 3rd to the 6th, 10th to the 13th, 21st to the 27th, and 29th, to the 31st. During these times daily falls one inch and upwards were of repeated occurrence.

Storms occurred at many places from the second to the 6th ; at a few places in the south-west on the 7th and 10th ; very generally from the 23rd to the 27th ; and in the west from the 29th to the 31st.

Thunderstorms are reported from thirteen places with a mean of two ; and Auroras at six places with a mean of one for each place.

INSTRUCTIONS TO REGISTRARS.

"If, at any time, the Births (whether legitimate or illegitimate), the Deaths, or the Marriages registered during the Quarter have been above or below the average, here state what you consider to be the cause, and whether epidemics, such as Measles, Typhus, Cholera, etc., have prevailed in the District; or if there is any other fact in the character of the Weather, Sanitary or Social Arrangements, Movement of the Population, etc., which will account for the circumstance."

The Figures refer to the Numbers of the Districts in the preceding Tables.

* The actual number of Districts is 1060—many Parishes and Burghs having been divided into two or more Districts for the purpose of Registration. Thus Edinburgh and Glasgow, to each of which only a single number is assigned in the Tables, consist of 5 and 14 Districts respectively. In forming the alphabetical arrangement the principle adopted has been to place compound names in the order in which they are pronounced.
